BlackFacts For Schools – The 21st Century Approach to Teaching Black History

Founded in 1997 by Bed-Stuy native / resident and MIT Alumnus Ken Granderson and fellow Black Technologist Dale Dowdie, who have been building technologies for communities of color since putting Boston's Black neighborhoods online in 1996, BlackFacts.com is the world's first Black History search engine.

Today, with one million articles, curated and organized by our proprietary AI-powered system Timbuktu™, BlackFacts is the world's largest source of Black History and current news on the Internet.

BlackFacts For Schools uses our library of over 1000 original Black History videos in 12 series, including the 'Black Facts Minute,' a short Black History video for every day of the calendar year, and adds narration, teacher's talking points, student writing exercises, quizzes and classroom activities.

MIDDLE & HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

- Enjoy Learning Black History the way they use social media
- Learn Black History in their native language (as languages are added)
- Learn of Black past and present Icons they won't read about in most books
- Learn about diverse Black contributors to society they can relate to

EDUCATORS

- Save time not having to research topics
- Get Black History lesson plans for every day of the calendar year
- Get to teach subjects and events outside the mainstream
- Get Black History Library in the palm of their hand

SCHOOLS, DISTRICTS & DEPARTMENTS OF EDUCATION

- Save money not paying book printing and shipping costs
- Digital Content never wears out or needs to be replaced
- Video catalog and languages are continually expanding
- Initial Schools get Pioneer License of Introductory Annual Renewal Price for Entire School, Forever!

BlackFacts For Schools is Comprehensive, Innovative, Future-Proofed, and makes learning Black History FUN!

Learn More in our "Intro to BlackFacts For Schools" video at https://links.blackfacts.com/schools