Help Protect the Future of Black History and Ethnic Studies This Holiday Season!

I'm Ken Granderson, a Bed-Stuy Brooklyn native and MIT Alumnus who has been using technology to tell the stories of underserved communities since 1995, and has been putting Black History online at <https://blackfacts.com> since 1997. You can learn about my work on my website <https://kengranderson.com>, in the book Black Software: The Internet & Racial Justice, from the AfroNet to Black Lives Matter, or by simply Googling my name.

As the holiday season approaches, I am reaching out to invite you to help safeguard our history, inspire our children, and empower educators across the nation. The “Protect Black History” campaign is your opportunity to make an immediate and lasting impact by sponsoring Diversity Schoolhouse by BlackFacts.com, my groundbreaking ed-tech platform for teaching Black History and Ethnic Studies in schools nationwide.

TESTIMONIAL

With the Diversity Schoolhouse video series we are introducing Black history daily on our message boards and beginning to use these videos as part of our curriculum for Black history and various Social Studies and English classes. The students love this resource and now we are beginning to tell cultural stories on our website.

TESTIMONIAL

This is truly an amazing resource. Diversity Schoolhouse will really enhance how we teach Black history in our school and other schools in our district. Content that can save time for our teachers, many of who are not well versed in Black history. The fact that there are Spanish language versions of the videos is especially important for our students that are primary Spanish speakers at home.

Why Now?

The changing educational landscape, particularly with the potential implications of Project 2025, threatens vital public education programs. Grassroots-driven solutions like Diversity Schoolhouse are essential to ensure that Black History and Ethnic Studies remain accessible to students nationwide.

Thus, we are launching the 'Protect Black History' School Sponsorship Campaign.

The Campaign: Now to Year-End

Starting now and running through the end of the year, our campaign combines Small Business Saturday, Cyber Monday, and Giving Tuesday into one impactful initiative where your sponsorship dollars will put Black History and Ethnic studies in more schools via a unique software application created by a small, Black-owned business. Our campaign goal is to introduce Diversity Schoolhouse to schools across the country, ensuring educators have the tools they need to teach Black History and Ethnic Studies regardless of local or state budgets, or national trends.

Thanks to our partnership with Converge Mentor, a 501(c)(3) organization, your 'Protect Black History' sponsorships are 100% tax-deductible.

How You Can Help

Diversity Schoolhouse is a school-wide subscription that puts the ability to learn or teach Black History into the hands of the entire faculty at a cost similar to many one-day outings of just $2,000, for an entire calendar year. Two- and three-year subscriptions are discounted at $3,500 and $5,000, respectively. Sponsorship options include:

1. Targeted School Sponsorships

Sponsor your own K-12 alma mater, your child's school or multiple schools in your current or childhood neighborhood.

2. Harambee ('All pull together') Sponsorships

Sponsorships of any size will be pooled to sponsor schools in underserved districts.

3. Corporate Partnerships

Showcase your company's commitment to diverse education by sponsoring multiple schools or an entire district. Branding opportunities include having your company name, colors and logo featured in Diversity Schoolhouse, recognition on our websites, and shoutouts to BlackFacts' 200,000 social media followers on Facebook, Instagram, LinkedIn, Twitter and TikTok.
